Case No. A02 -- 0097-CI (JKS)

Motion to Extend Discovery Date

Comes now Ralph Kermit Winterrowd 2nd with this Motion to Extend the Discovery Date from closing on March 28, 2008 until July 28, 2008. The Defendants and the Plaintiff are having difficulty at this time with providing discovery and setting up depositions due to different problems. Brad Nelson's discovery is so broad and the information requested may have to be limited upon Motion, but there is valid background information that is also important on traffic stops with these different parties. Also the person that I saw on the medial problem is no longer in Alaska and communication with her now is still non-existent, which is also important for this Case – still working on this issue.

Winterrowd has waited for over seven years from the start of this Case, so it is quite apparent that the only damage is to the Plaintiff for any delays, but the extension of discovery is in the interest of justice and Due Process of Law to the Plaintiff.

The Plaintiff does not wish to involve the Court at this time, although there is a good possibility that future intervention will be required with the likelihood of requiring going to 9th Circuit for resolution of discovery issues with the Defendants.

Therefore, the Plaintiff motion this Court for an extension of four (4) months for the Discovery closing date from March 28 until July 28, 2008 with all other dates being adjusted as required by the four month extension.

My hand,
 2nd
